

Internship case study

Name: Jinal Zaveri

Role: Junior Sustainability Intern

Joined: 2022

Course: Masters in Sustainability, Entrepreneurship and Design

When Aston Group visited the Green Jobs Fair at Walthamstow Wetlands in November, we met many interesting people.

One of them was Jinal Zaveri. She took a seat with our Strategic Communications Manager, Julie Dunn, at a speed meet table and they really hit it off!

It was clear Jinal could be a real asset at Aston Group. Jinal previously studied at Kingston, and more recently, at Brunel University studying Sustainability, Entrepreneurship and Design. She was looking for a job in corporate sustainability and marketing, with a special preference towards consumer social responsibility.

“Working at Aston Group for the past few weeks has not only allowed me to implement my academic knowledge and skills but has also helped me gain valuable experience which will help me progress my career in the field of corporate sustainability.”

It was the perfect timing for Aston Group to bring Jinal into the mix with her enthusiasm and business knowledge. She showed such a keen interest in Aston Group and our sustainability challenge ahead.

We are pleased to say Jinal has joined us as a Junior Sustainability Intern for three months, it's a new position at Aston Group and we are excited to work together.
